OSHA names new training institute

BY CCTIMES, Published February 16, 2008

The U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) recently named the Chabot-Las Positas Community College District (California) one of eight new OSHA Training Institute Education Centers and the only one in northern California.

"The Department of Labor was looking for an organization to fill critical training needs in the Bay Area and Sacramento regions. We were their ideal choice based on our extensive contract education department and our current relationship with business and industry clients," said District Chancellor Joel Kinnamon.

The district will also serve OSHA's Region 9, which includes Arizona, Nevada, Hawaii, Guam and American Samoa.
