OSHA Training Classes Offered in Bay Area

The Chabot-Los Positas Community College District is now offering OSHA training classes at the new OSHA Training Center in Pleasanton, one of eight new training centers added nationwide last year.

This is a new opportunity for affiliates in Northern California to get the federal OSHA training that is required for teaching, such as OSHA 500 and other construction related courses, in the Bay Area.

Trainings include: access to the most up-to-date safety and health information, information on the application of OSHA regulations in the workplace, high-quality, current learning materials for ongoing reference, and networking opportunities with other safety professionals.

Instructors are available to bring trainings to job sites as well.
